Death of Mrs. W. H. Chollar—Rev. E. F. Studley to End Pastorate Sunday—Union Temperance Meeting to Be Addressed by Mrs. C. B. Buel—17 Degrees Above Zero.

Following an illness from which for several days there has been barely a hope that she would recover, Mrs. W. H. Chollar died at her home Friday morning. For the past two years she had been in failing health, her condition becoming serious, however, only a few weeks ago.

Born in Killingly in December, 1811, Mrs. Chollar had lived the many years of her life in this town. Her maiden name was Mary Roach Danielson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Danielson, and his was of the family so long identified with the history of Killingly and after which the borough takes its name.

An exceptionally charming disposition, Mrs. Chollar was a woman who was loved best by those who knew her longest. Her life, her practical application of the sweetest goodness, charity and never failing interest in persons and matters that benefited much by the attention that she so generously bestowed were stored in memories which will remain in her loving heart, which was an inspiration.

A member of the Westfield Congregational church and for many years president of its Women's Board of Missions, her interest in religious work and her devotion to the work of her life were directed into this field. She also paid close attention to Sunday school work, wherein she also inspired the children to achieve many desirable results.

In 1865 the deceased married in Danielson Deacon W. H. Chollar, by whom she is survived with two daughters, Mrs. Sarah Howard, wife of Rev. John Howard, a former principal of Killingly high school, now a missionary in Mexico, and Miss Marion D. Chollar, member of the faculty of Killingly high school.

Dayville Gets Baseball Fever.

Up at Dayville, in spite of the snow and still temperature, preparations are being made for the time when baseball weather will make itself felt. The boys are being organized and the members will help their energies to developing a team that will make them proud of the town.

The plan is to get the game in Dayville back to the desirable condition it was in there during 1908-1909, that was before Dayville developed its present winning team and before about all the money taken in, probably more, was spent to keep the team in shape. In those years Dayville did not drop at the top in the league struggle, but the boys on the team were playing on a competitive basis, and their share of the profits was well satisfied. That's the plan that is again to be adopted this year. Everybody in the village is rooting for the team, and the prospects are for a very successful season.
